METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR ACCESSING A DATABASE THROUGH A NETWORK

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system includes a client which can communicate through a network and a database layer with any of several databases. The client communicates with the database layer using a public network communication protocol, in a manner independent of respective protocols specific to each of the databases. The database layer handles communication with each database according to the respective protocol of that database.